Western New York (WNY) is a region deeply rooted in history, yet moving boldly toward a dynamic future. WNY's history of innovation and entrepreneurship is still alive. The region has a large and vibrant economy with a particular focus on manufacturing. Manufacturers of hard goods such as transportation equipment, machinery, and fabricated metal products are important area industries. Western New York's long history as an industrial center makes it a natural choice for companies interested in integrating sophisticated technologies into Buffalo-Niagara's manufacturing facilities. The Western New York Region includes the Buffalo-Niagara Metropolitan area, which is comprised of Erie and Niagara counties, and also includes Allegany, Cattaraugus, and Chautauqua counties. The WNY region is strategically located within 500 miles/800 km of 40 percent of the U.S. population. WNY's international border with Canada makes it a bi-national gateway for commerce, facilitating $78 billion in annual trade between Canada and the United States.

Western New Yorkers are known for their welcoming nature and spirited loyalty. Get past the snowy stereotype and you will be captivated. WNY boasts a wonderful quality of life, with the distinct advantage of both city and suburban living. Visitors and residents of WNY alike are impressed by its majestic scenery, not to mention the numerous sites and attractions that provide opportunities for recreation in every season. WNY is known for its snow, but dig a little deeper and you'll discover that the region enjoys four distinct seasons, each remarkable in its own right.

In response to client demand, in June of 2017, Dickie McCamey opened a second New York office in Buffalo. The focus of the Buffalo office is representation of defendants in litigation involving general liability, premises liability, medical malpractice, product liability claims, and workers' compensation. The Buffalo office is supported by the comprehensive resources of Dickie McCamey's other 20 offices, which collectively include more than 190 attorneys. Dickie McCamey's expansion is the direct result of the firm's value proposition founded upon matching the right lawyer with the issue in the case. This streamlined approach is both cost and time effective for clients. It is the tradition of this hands-on service that has fueled the firm's growth.
